Sunbury police skip to the roo

Victoria Police on Wednesday, 21/06/2017 19:51 AEST

Sunbury police took a walk on the wild side yesterday to save a furry mate in need.

After receiving reports of a kangaroo hit by a car about 8.20am, Leading Senior Constable Canning and Constable Perkins put their roo-sources together to tend to the animal at the intersection of Racecourse Road and Webb Court.

While they were sadly unable to rescue the kangaroo due to the extent of her injuries, they spotted a young joey nearby, who had been left orphaned by the collision.

Dubbed Wilbur, the shivering marsupial was taken a hop, skip and jump away to the Sunbury Police Station, where he was kept safe and warm while waiting for wildlife rescuers to arrive.

After a quick assessment, Wilbur was cleared of any injuries and is expected to grow up to be strong and healthy.

Disqualified driver crashes into tree - Central West area

New South Wales Police on Wednesday, 21/06/2017 15:14 AEST

Two people and a baby have escaped injury after a disqualified driver crashed a car into a tree in the state's Central West yesterday.

Just after 2pm yesterday (Tuesday 20 June 2017), police from Lachlan Highway Patrol signalled for a car travelling westbound along Lake Cargelligo Road, Lake Cargelligo, to stop for a random breath test.

The driver allegedly veered into the eastbound lane of the street before continuing into the dirt shoulder and down a culvert. The car then lost control and smashed into a tree.

Police will allege the 28-year-old male driver swapped seats with the 37-year-old female passenger while the car was still in motion. A six-month-old boy, who was strapped in the backseat, was unharmed.

The woman and infant were taken to Lake Cargelligo Hospital as a precautionary measure. The two have since been released from hospital.
